Whitewall Presents: Douglas Elliman in New York, Los Angeles, and Boca Raton

111W57, New York

Steinway Hall is being reimagined and integrated with the modern new tower as remarkable residences and amenity spaces. Rising 1,428 feet above the historic site, 111 West 57th Street is a bold new landmark on the Manhattan skyline featuring unrivaled, perfectly centered, 360-degree views of Central Park, Midtown Manhattan, and beyond. The soaring tower, designed by SHoP Architects, will feature 46 beautifully proportioned full-floor and duplex residences, with interiors by Studio Sofield. The intricate facade of terra cotta, glass, and bronze brings back the materials and detailing of the classic New York City skyscraper.

The Residences at The West Hollywood EDITION, Los Angeles

Created by the renowned architect John Pawson, The Residences at The West Hollywood EDITION are inspired by the warm climate, golden light, and unique spirit of Los Angeles. Indoor and outdoor living areas are elegantly intertwined and panoramic views are celebrated. Walls of full-height windows glide along tracks until they virtually disappear, while bronze-hued louvered screens filter sunlight. White oak flooring transitions seamlessly to expansive private terraces. Custom elements include Pawson-designed millwork, cabinetry, hardware, and lighting. Each of the 20 residences, located exclusively on the floors above the hotel, features ceiling heights over 10 feet and large art walls.

108 Leonard, New York

108 Leonard pays homage to the most coveted elements of an architectural masterpiece, including dramatic details of scale, proportion, and volume. Tribeca's most iconic century-old building, the property was originally built in 1894 by renowned architects McKim, Mead & White. Today, its grand transformation offers 152 highly appointed residences by Jeffrey Beers International, juxtaposing classic details like oversized moldings, chevron-patterned oak floors, and one-of-a-kind architectural windows with contemporary touches. From the outside, 108 Leonard is a historic landmark that pays homage to a gilded bygone era; on the inside, it is a bright canvas of modern restraint, ready to adapt to one's individual lifestyle.
